Eight Foot Llama Announces: The Penguin Ultimatum

June 16, 2003 – Eight Foot Llama has announced that their third full-color boxed game, The Penguin Ultimatum, will be available in stores October 2003. Like their Games 100 titles Who Stole Ed's Pants? and Monkeys on the Moon, Eight Foot Llama's new release is a fully-complete, non-collectible family strategy game with wooden and glass components. It retails for $19.95.

In The Penguin Ultimatum, players are court jesters tasked by their Emperor to throw "a really good party" for the penguin hordes. Penguin and Entertainer Cards are laid out on the table to form an interconnected grid. As the entertainers perform, players score points based on which penguins they've chosen as special guests at the party. Also, the entertainers themselves are awarded to the players, allowing for a second way to score. Mastering the balancing act between both scoring mechanisms is the key to victory.

The game is designed for 3-4 players aged 10 and up and plays in about 45 minutes. A small tweak is included in the rules for a good 2-player variant as well.

The game includes:

- 110 full-size, full-color cards on thick cardstock
- 8 painted color wooden pieces
- 12 glass stones
- A full-color rules sheet

The game was designed by Jim Doherty. It features twenty-three original drawings by cartoonist Scott Starkey as well as cover art by Rick Chamberlain.
